The antiquity of the rose is so great that all account of its origin has been lost. It is not mentioned in the biblical writings earlier than the reign of Solomon, but the during the reign of the luxurious and muchmarried king. In Egypt the rose is de-picted on a number of very early monu-ments, believed to date from 3000 to 3500 B. and in the tomb of an Egyptian princers. disinterred a year ago, in southern Egypt several hermetically sealed vials were found which, when opened, contained genuine after of roses, so that the modern claims for the liscovery of this delicious perfume are in vain. Rose water, or the escence of roses is mentioned by Homer in the "Hiad;" Homer and Solomon were nearly contemporaneous. Both the Greeke and Hebrews probably borrowed the idea of its manufacture from the Egyptians, and these, for aught anybody can tell, may have had it from the Indians or from the Chinese, for the latter claim for each of their discoveries and ventions a most marvelous, not to say in-credible, antiquity. The rose is one of those flowers which by the people of every land are taken for granted as so well known as to need no description and hardly mention for it is a singular fact that every contingent on the globe, with the solitary excep-tion of Australia, produces wild roses. Ever the frozen regions of the north, where the is at best a season which may be described roses, and travelers through Greenland, Kamschatka and northern Siberia found, in the proper season, an abundance of blossoms, while the crews of whaling versels which call at Spitzbergen come off shore with boquets of the native Spitzbergen rose All wild roses are not of the same kind, for there are over 1,000 species of the wild rose to botanists, and the varieties are innumerable. As a commercial product the rose is grown in many parts of the world. Not only in the neighborhood of Paris, but more extensively in the south of France, roses are cultivated for the purpose of manufacuring the attar, and over 30 000,000 pounds of rose leaves are annually collected by the French for the purpose of making rose water or the attar of rose. In Algiers and Tunis the rose was formerly grown much more than at present, for the competition of other places has become so severe that the their attention to the geranium, which that mild climate, producing its flower nearly all the year, is a more profitable The valley of Damascus yields a fine quality of attar and the vale of Cashmere has for ages been famous, not only for its roses, but also for the quality of its product In northern and central India rose water and attar are manufactured.

No more charming spectacle is presented in the world than a Roumelian rose field during picking season; the azure sky above. the gray Balkans closing the northern land-scape, the plain leading off to the Maritza toward the south and thousands of acres covered with rose bushes in full bloom. It is as though the earth had suddenly burst into blossom. Everywhere through the men, women and children boys and girls for the rose harvest must be quickly gath ered, if at all, and the population finds easy tion, and whole fmilies migrate from Bosnia, Servia, northern Bulgaria, Albania and even from Greece, Roumania and Asia Minor to take part in gathering the roses. The harvest lasts, se already stated, about eight weeks, and during this time any one who can pick the roses can find a job in the southern Balkans.

But they are soon won over and the convention will be practically unanimous in favor of a ticket.

The platform has been much discussed. It will reaffirm the Indianapolis declaration of last year; will commend the administration in the case of the fact that no part of the sand father Spellman was summoned and he at once prepared to administer the convention will be practically unanimous in produce it, of its importance to the countries where it is made, or of the races of proposed in the pleasure. It is, however, but one illustration of the last that no part of the world's inhabitants are independent of the line of the last that no part of the last the administration last the demand.

The fair lady to whom the essence or and he at once prepared to administer the consolation of religion. For two hours the consolation of religion. For two hours the same consolation of religion. For two hours the consolation of religion. For two hours the same consolation of religion. For two hours the consolation of religion. For two hours the same has little idea of the last once prepared to administer the consolation of religion. For two hours the consolation of religion to administer the consolation of religion. For two hours the consolation of religion. as badly as before.

HOT WEATHER DYSPEPSIA

Thousands Suffer from it at This Sea son of the Year. Hot weather dyspepsia may be recognized by the following symptoms: Depression of spirits, heaviness and pain in the stomach after meals, loss of flesh and appetite, no desire for food, had taste in the mouth, ca-pecially in the morning, wind in stomach and bowels, irritable disposition. weakness, weariness, costiveness, headache palpitation, heartburn. It is a mistake to treat such troubles with "tonics." "blood purifiers." catharties," pills," because the whole trouble is in the stomach. It is indi-gestion or dyspepsia and nothing else. And these symptoms rapidly disap-pear when the stomach is relieved, strengthened, and cleaned by Stuart's Dyspersia Tablets. They should be taken after meals and a few carried in the pocket to be used whenever any pain or distress is felt in the stomach. They are prepared only for stomach troubles. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are endorsed by such physicians as Dr. Harlandson, Dr. Jennison and Dr. Mayer because they contain the natural digestive acids and fruit on sences which, when taken into the stomach, cause the prompt digestion of the food before it has time to ferment and sour, which is the cause of the mischief.

CANTON, O. July 6.—Mother McKinley is about the house as usual this morning and apparently suffering no serious effects from her fall of yesterday. She helities the accident and says she will soon recover.
